

Introduction to Orthodox Theology: Dionysios the Areopagite and Maximos the Confessor

On Friday 17 December many were not able to attend the second lecture (“Dionysios the Areopagite and Neoplatonism”) in this series due to heavy snowfall. On Thursday 20 January Revd. Prof. Andrew Louth was not able to come to Amsterdam due to a sprained ankle. Fortunately, he is recuperating and intends to repeat the lecture on Thursday 20 January at 18:00 hours in room 13A-11 (on the top floor of the main university building). At 19 hours he will continue the series Introduction to Orthodox Theology: Apophasis & Theosis in the same room with the third lecture entitled "Maximos the Confessor and Cosmic Theology".

From the download-section of the ACEOT-website (www.aceot.nl) you can download the lecture handouts of both lectures. You are cordially invited to attend the lectures; please register beforehand through the website or by replying to this The email.

The fourth and final lecture in this series on St Gregorios Palamas will be held on 14 April at 19 hours.

Art and Spirituality of the Russian Orthodox Tradition in Hermitage Amsterdam
